The De la Houssaye family is mentioned in the annals of France as early as the tenth century. In the First Crusade there was a Sieur de la Houssaye attached to the King as First Equerry. In the Second and Third Crusades, there are mentioned first a Sieur de la Houssaye and Second a Count de la Houssaye. Again in the Vendaen wars, a Count de la Houssaye figures prominently as a leader.

No definite records are available, however, until the earlier part of the 17th century when the family appears to have become an established one with a chateau at Nantes. The first known head of the family is:

1. Le Pelletier de la Houssaye, a distinguished magistrate, married to Françoise, daughter of the Count Alain de Tréguier et Marguerite, dame de Pétronille d'Avaugour (mentioned in the genealogy of the house of Penthievre). From them was born,
2. Martin le Pelletier de la Houssaye who, towards the end of the 16th century, came to Paris and established himself there and was made Master of Accounts. He was married to Marie de Fayet, daughter of Nicolas, Sieur de Fayet, President of the Hall of Accounts and of Diane de Sublet. Of them was born,
3. Nicolas le Pelletier, Count de la Houssaye, Master of Accounts in 1630, who married Catherine Vialart, daughter of Michel Vialart, French Ambassador to Switzerland, and of Charlotte de Signy, daughter of the Count de Signy. Their children were: Jacques, as follows, and Nicolas, the second born.
4. Jaques le Pelletier, Count de la Houssaye, Counsellor of Parliament of Paris January 7, 1645, died leaving no children from his marriage to Marie d'Ardier, daughter of Paul, Count de Beauregard, President of the Hall of Accounts, and Louise d'Ollier.
5. Nicolas le Peilletier, Count de la Houssays, youngest brother of the preceding Count, inherited the title. He was made Counsellor in Parliament of Paris February 19, 1653, Master of Inquiries, December 9, 1660, died January 10, 1674. He married Catherine de Perigny, who died May 2, 1720, daughter of Jean Baptiste, Count de Perigny, Master of Inquiries, and of Catherine de Talon. They had the following children:
  1. Félix, as follows,
  2. Claude Henri, second son,
  3. Catherine, who died May 16, 1703, married to Michel Amelot, Marquis de Sournay, etc., Counsellor of State and Ambassador to Spain, from whom were born three children.
6. Félix le Pelletier, Count de la Houssaye, de Signy et de Chateau-Poissy, Counsellor at the Castle, then in Parliament of Paris, February 26, 1687, Master of In-
